About the Hiroshima Brand

The Hiroshima Brand system certifies particularly outstanding specialty products from Hiroshima and promotes them throughout Japan to improve their name recognition and boost sales, as well as improve the image of Hiroshima, thus aiming to vitalize the regional economy and promote more visitors to Hiroshima.

The Hiroshima Brand Logo

This logo expresses Hiroshima's unique character using origami, an idea borrowed from folded cranes, with the letter "h" for Hiroshima folded like origami. It also evokes the Japanese phrase "with a folded certificate," which is used to signify reliability and high quality.

The Hiroshima Brand Certification System

Our Hiroshima Brand certification system was established in 2007, and as of March 2023, we have certified the 106 products listed in this booklet.

Basic Criteria

The product has a natural, historical, traditional, or cultural background or narrative related to Hiroshima, is a safe product, and can be expected to improve the name recognition of the Hiroshima Brand.

Hiroshima needles are made with traditional craft techniques, making them flexible yet warp resistant, and allowing them to move smoothly through fabric. The history of Hiroshima needles began over 300 years ago when Lord Asano, the ruler of the Hiroshima Domain, introduced needle making to lower ranking members of the samurai class. Northern Hiroshima became a hub for tatara ironmaking using rich iron sands. The irons forged there were transported to Hiroshima City via waterways and became materials for needle making, allowing the industry to grow and flourish. While the atomic bombing caused catastrophic damage to the needle making industry, it managed to recover, and the tradition of Hiroshima needles continues today, with 90% of all domestic hand-sewing needles and marking pins produced in Hiroshima, making it the largest domestic needle producer in all of Japan. In addition, 70% of all needles made in Hiroshima are exported overseas, earning high praise for their quality around the world.

Traditional Craftworks 34

It is said that the tradition of Miyajima rokuro zaiku came to the island in the mid-1800s. Instead of using lacquer to create brightly colored pieces, this traditional craftwork features the natural beauty of wood, allowing the beautiful woodgrain to take center stage. Each piece features the gentle curves and warmth that only handcrafted woodwork can provide. With each use, the pieces darken in color, becoming more refined. Enjoy the natural progression of each piece as it becomes a permanent part of your home.

Traditional Craftworks #12

Mivaiima Rokuro Zaiku (Wooden Lathe Crafts)

Kobayashi Shōsai [Kobayashi Isshōdō]

Delicate and beautiful lacquer art

Takamori-e techniques are passed down to one successor per generation: the works of the current Ikkokusai (7th generation) are brilliant representations of seasonal Japanese aesthetics, using styles which have been inherited from the very first generation of artisans. Created with unique techniques not often found in the world of Japanese lacquer art, artisans layer lacquer to create 3D designs of flowers, insects, and more, and then add colored lacquer to bring the detailed designs to life. These craftworks are the pride of Hiroshima, portraying the softness of a painting and the hardiness of a sculpture all at the same time.

Traditional hand-painted carp streamers: carrying over 400 years of history to the present

These streamers, a traditional symbol of success in life, date back to the Edo period and are a part of traditional Japanese culture, flown on Children's Day by parents to symbolize their wishes for the healthy development and success of children. Each one of our streamers is made completely by hand using washi paper made by Hiroshima's only washi maker, Otake Tesuki Washi, The warmth of washi paper hand-painted with bright and lively colors make our hand-painted streamers stand out as one of the last remaining handmade streamers in all of Japan. Enjoy all of the culture and artistry that goes into each of our streamers.

Sugimoto Umi [Hiroshima Koinobori]

A culmination of traditional craftworks The history of Hiroshima Buddhist altars begins with the spread of Pure Land Sect Buddhism beginning in the 13th century. This traditional craft developed further in the Edo period as it became easier to move materials and ship completed altars out using the waterways of Hiroshima castle town. In the Taisho era, Hiroshima became the number one manufacturer of Buddhist altars, with a specialization in gold-leaf Buddhist altars. However, after the atomic bombing in 1945, the so-called Buddhist Altar Row (comprised of many altar manufacturers) was completely destroyed. The industry was able to recover from the bombing, and today, the tradition of Hiroshima Buddhist altar-making continues. This traditional craftwork is the culmination of seven different traditional handcrafts, and each piece is the careful work of a master. With praise for its coating and gold-leaf techniques, the gloss of the heavy black lacquer adds a dignified sophistication while the gold leaf brings warmth and tranquility, and the intricate carvings will leave you in awe of the beauty of Japanese aesthetics.

Hiroshima Religious Implements Commerce and Industry Co-op

This pottery ware is made using the blessed sands of the Itsukushima Shrine on Miyajima mixed with clay. Its roots are ancient, born of a tradition that began with travelers. They would gather sands from below the Itsukushima Shrine and carry it with them for good luck and safety during their travels. Once they safely returned, they would return the sand along with sand from their destination. Miyajima Osuna pottery, a traditional Hiroshima craft art, has become a symbol of good fortune and is the perfect gift for any occasion.
