Hiroshima Pocket Peace Guide
 Atomic Bombed Buildings

1

The violent blast and heat from the atomic bomb burnt almost all buildings within a 2 km radius to the ground. Wooden buildings further than 2 km away were heavily damaged and 90% of the city's buildings were completely destroyed. After the bombing, buildings that were not fit for use were cleared away and buildings that were repaired and in use for a short while were also demolished.

Because of this, citizens sought out the preservation of atomic bombed buildings and the City Council passed a resolution that "the buildings should be preserved as a historical legacy for Hiroshima's citizens."

In 1993 the City of Hiroshima established the "Guidelines for the Preservation and Inheritance of Atomic Bombed Buildings," creating a register for all atomic bombed buildings within a 5 km radius and enlisting the cooperation of the owners to preserve the buildings as well as assisting with the maintenance and repair costs.

Including the Atomic Bomb Dome, there are 90 atomic bombed buildings in the 5 km radius (22 public buildings and 68 private buildings as of April 1, 2009), and they convey the effects of the bombing even now.
